

Volunteer Role Description: Filmmaker

Where: All over the Eden

Commitment: Whatever time you can spare

Duration: Ongoing

Why we want you: The Eden is truly a paradise on earth, with a wide variety of wildlife, landscapes and features that we would love to be able to share with our audiences to:

- Encourage people to visit and enjoy their local river,
- Increase their knowledge of the special wildlife, features and places found in the Eden Valley, and to
- Change perceptions about the river, and motivate people to care for the river and its fragile habitats.

Short films are increasingly becoming a key method for us to get the charity's messages out to the widest possible audience, and we are aiming to launch a series of films this year that explain some of Eden's features, endangered species, and the work we do to protect and improve Eden's rivers.

We would love to hear from filmmakers who can create great short films that share our passion for Eden's rivers, landscapes and wildlife!

We'd also like to hear from people who just want to film some raw footage for us.

Requirements: An interest in the environment and the outdoors – happy to film whatever the weather!

Ideally you will own your own equipment, but we do have a GoPro and a large underwater camera you could borrow.

We will provide you with a filming brief of the film(s) we would like to make. You can cherry-pick which ones you would like to capture based on your interests and schedule.

All films would be copyright of Eden Rivers Trust, but naturally we will credit you on every film we use.

What's In It For You:

This role is one that is intended to fit easily into your current lifestyle and is a great chance to showcase and hone your filmmaking skills whilst enjoying the great outdoors here in the Eden.

An ideal way to build your portfolio / add to your CV.

You could see your films used on social media, as part of a campaign or educational resource or even as part of an exhibition!

Notes:

Own transport would be an advantage.
