

Caseless Caddisfly

These tiny creatures are very delicate - their homes are constantly under threat from pollution and changes in the environment

- They are found in streams, rivers, lakes and ponds,
- If you see one, this generally means that the water is clean,
- Adults hatch into Caddis flies which fly in the air at night and have hairy wings.

www.edenriverstrust.org.uk